Many people have been asking me about the implications of Neptune in Aries. Based on the symbolism and history, there are a few historic events worth noting. In 1533 when Neptune crossed into Aries, Pluto was in the early degrees of Aquarius, as it is today. At that time, Mars joined Neptune at 0 Aries. This was a turbulent time in English history. Henry VIII declared himself the head (Aries) of the Church of England (Neptune) and married Anne Boleyn who was pregnant. Three years later Anne was beheaded.

The last time Neptune crossed into Aries was on 14 April 1861. This was within a day of the beginning of the American Civil War. Neptune has just started its transition into Aries on 30 March this year. For full details get the recording here.

SCORPIO FULL MOON

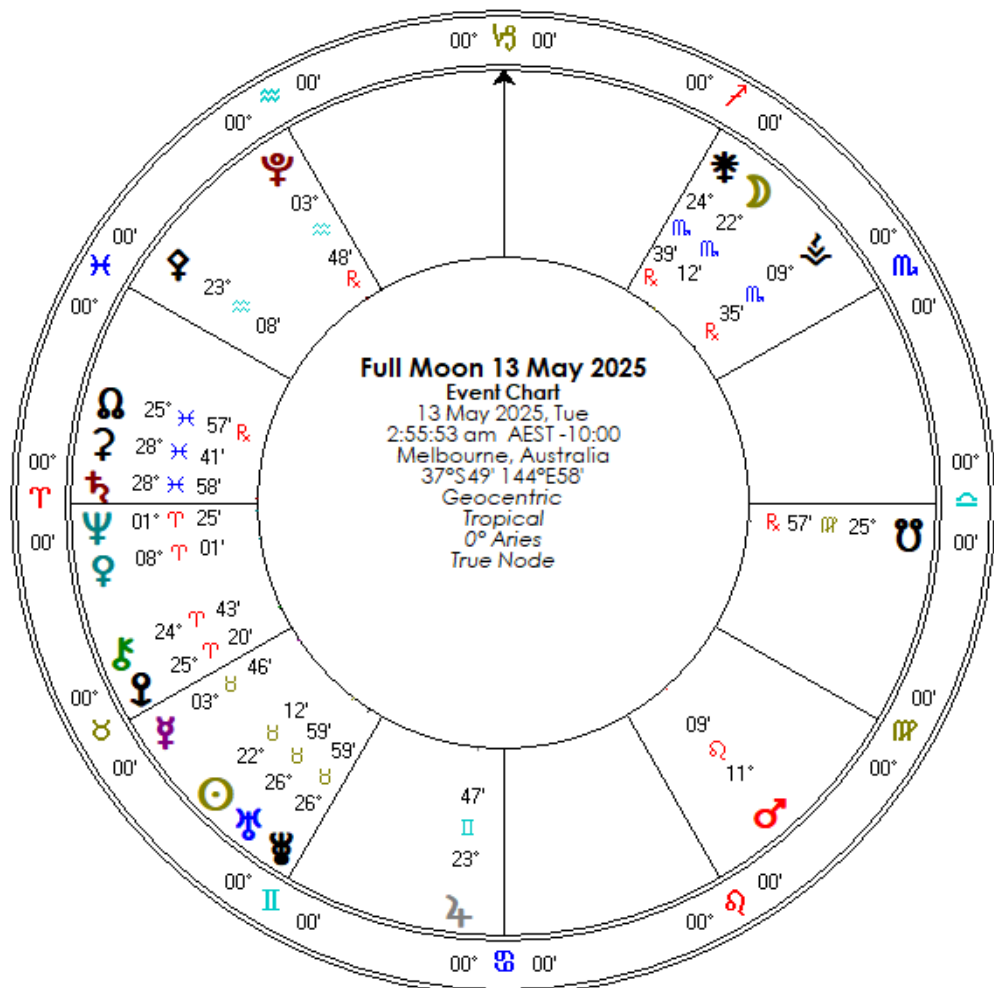

We are living through some very strange times which is reflected in the solar system and the many significant aspects that we are witnessing.

This month's Scorpio Full Moon highlights Uranus, Hygiea and Juno which are lining up with the Sun and Moon. There is also a square aspect to Pallas Athena in Aquarius. This arrangement focuses our attention on the fixed and polarising oppositions we are seeing across many settings. This is a passionate Full Moon where strong opinions and feelings will be given expression.

Meanwhile, Saturn and Ceres draw our attention to the limitations of planet Earth and the natural environment we share with other living things.

Saturn and Neptune are closing in on a conjunction, which will be exact in early 2026. I am currently researching their 36 year cycle of conjunctions and preparing an article detailing a range of events which direct the unfolding of social organisation over time. Though this aspect is not exact until February 2026, it is within orb, so we are already seeing this process begin to unfold.

GEMINI NEW SUPERMOON

Saturn has now shifted into Aries which escalates the upcoming conjunction with Neptune. There are more developments to come as Saturn and Neptune will backtrack into Pisces before their exact alignment early in 2026.

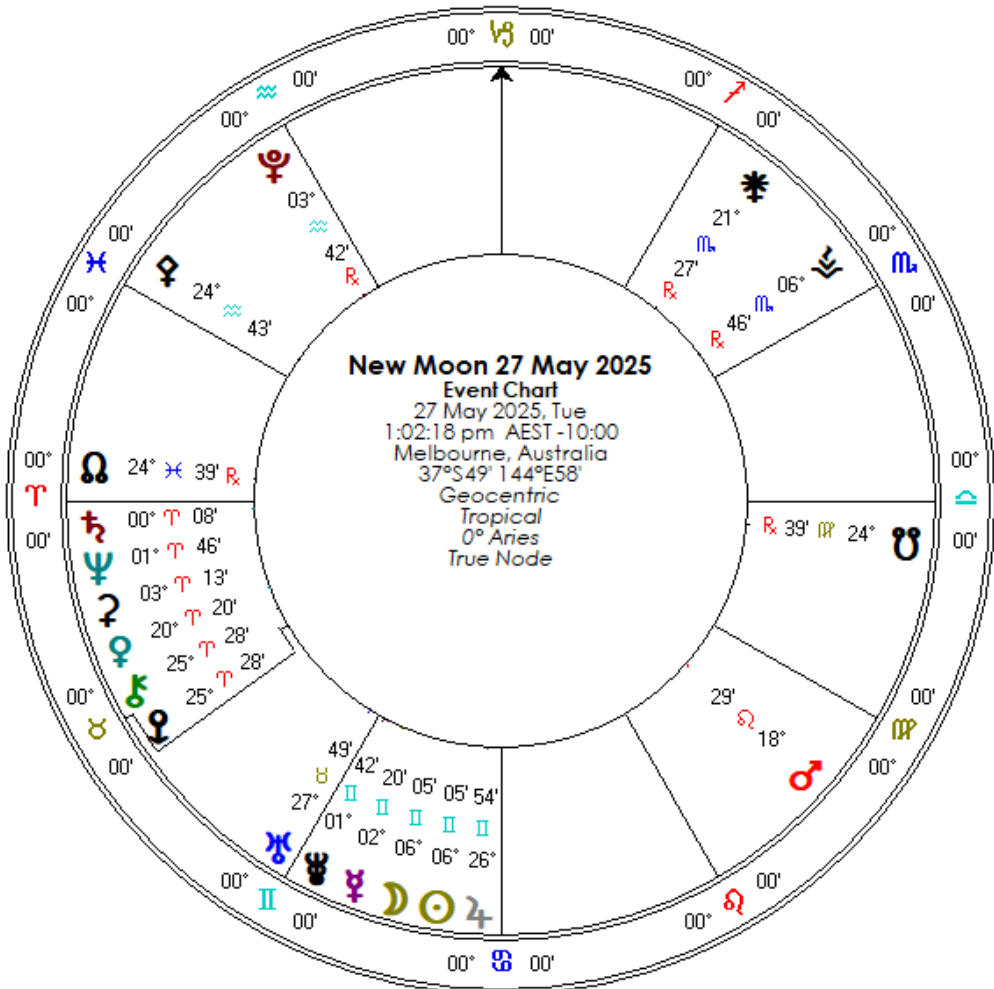

close conjunction of Chiron and Eris, which is exact to the minute of arc. Wounding and healing around being overlooked, ignored or excluded is highlighted. Aries is a self interested sign and does not like to be ignored. Dummy spits and temper tantrums could erupt. Mars in Leo also likes to be centre stage, and can hog the spotlight.

There is likely to be a lack of focus and awareness on other people and a heightened focus on self.

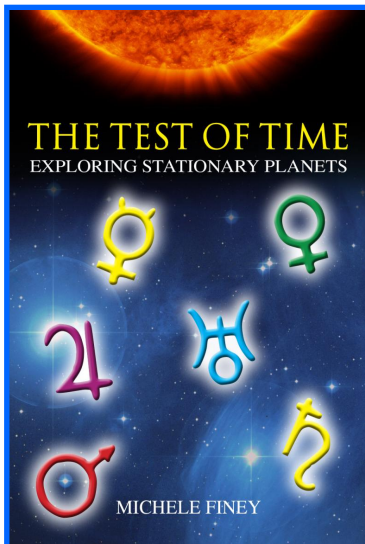

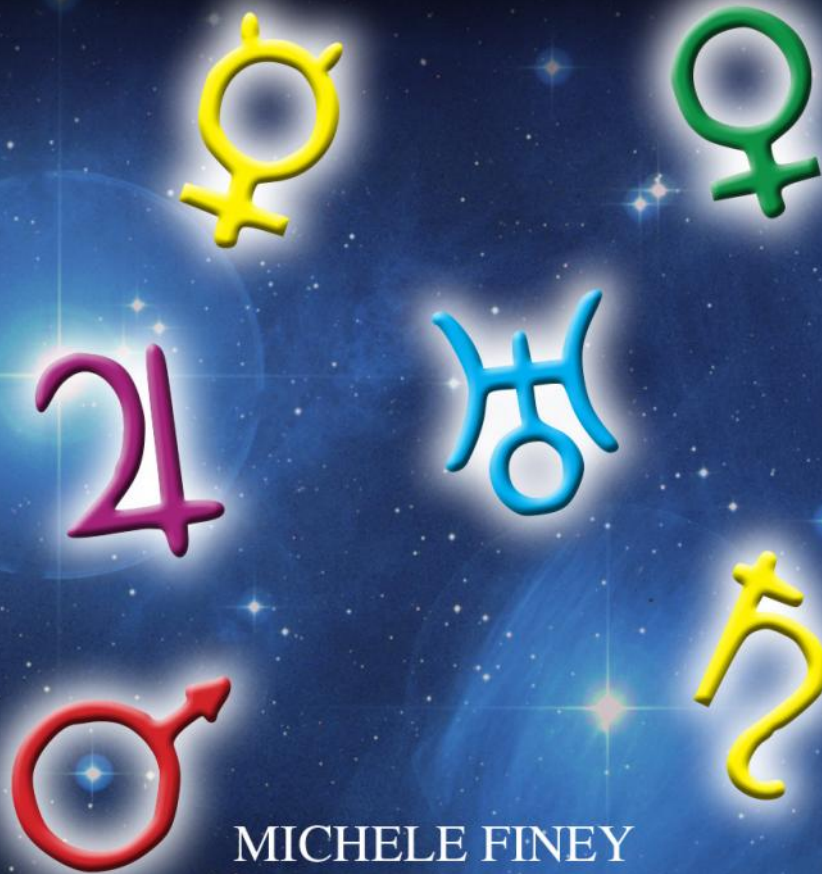

This New Moon in Gemini promotes debate on current political issues, so we are likely to see statements and conversations in the media around these matters. This is another New Supermoon.

There is a big line up of planets in Aries, including a very

AUSTRALIAN FEDERAL ELECTION

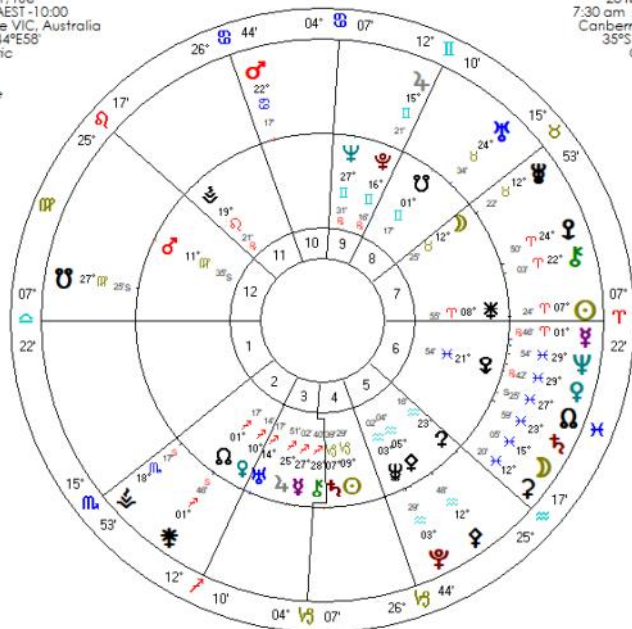

Most astrologers tend to use the Sydney proclamation chart for Australia. Regular INsight readers will know that I prefer to use the Melbourne legal creation chart for Australian Federation. Australia came into being as a legal entity at the stroke of midnight 1/1/1901 and the parliament was then in Melbourne, as it was until 1927.

The Prime Minister visited the Governor General at 7am and announced the election around 8am in a press conference. I have used 7.30am to illustrate the transits. Notably, transiting Hygiea is on our Moon. It is said that the Moon in a national chart represents the people of the nation. With Hygiea here, it suggests that health matters are front of mind with the people of Australia, which gels with opinion polls.

The difficulty facing astrologers trying to analyse the likely outcome of elections here is that a large majority of people now vote before election day. Casting a chart for the opening of the polling booths on election day might tell us the mood that day, but not before it, when people are often voting. It might be more valid to cast a chart for the time the election is called.

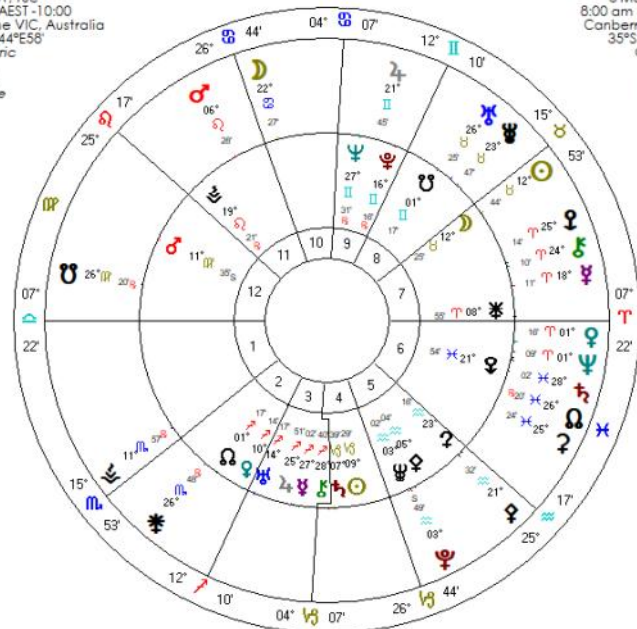

What is striking about the transits to this Federation chart on election day at 8am, is that the Sun is exactly aligning with Australia's Moon. This suggests a general feeling of positive optimism among the people. It's notable the transiting Pluto is across Hygiea, and stationary on election day, again emphasising that health matters will be high on the agenda with voters.
